Recent political developments in Turkey and the region pose challenges for the kind of cooperation programs that European donors operate inside Turkey. Our report examines how donors are reacting to the evolving political and security context and provides thoughts on how they should reorientate their aid programs. This will require rethinking approaches to economic development, EU harmonization, institution-building, civil society, migration management, and regional security.

The event will be held in English and there will be no translation. Please click here to register.
